Explore the Lower Bann Cycleway

The Lower Bann Cycleway is a 45 mile linear cycle route between Toome and Castlerock and predominately uses National Cycle Network Route 96. The scenic route follows the Lower Bann River corridor from Lough Neagh, through the rolling countryside of counties Antrim and Londonderry to the North Coast where it meets the Atlantic Ocean at the Barmouth near Castlerock. The low-lying landscape of this river corridor provides a gentle cycle, leaving cyclists to enjoy the route at their leisure, relax and take in the scenery of the Lower Bann. The cycleway passes through or close to the towns of Toome, Portglenone, Kilrea, Ballymoney and Coleraine.

Attractions Along the Route

Canal Walk, Toome

This traffic-free section of the route runs through attractive parkland alongside the Toome Canal, a short navigation channel parallel to the main river which enables access by boating traffic between the Lower Bann River and Lough Neagh. Canal Walk extends to the shores of Lough Neagh to a custom-built viewing platform which gives an outstanding panorama over the Lough, an important and protected haven for wildlife.

Portglenone Forest and Marina

South of the village is Portglenone Forest Park, an expansive wooded area classified as ancient woodland and an important conservation area for native flora and fauna and is particularly famous for its Spring bluebell display. Portglenone Marina is located on the banks of the River Bann on the edge of Portglenone village. The Marina is an important access point for water based activity and contains 18 floating pontoons, a slipway and picnic areas overlooking the river. The Historic arched bridge in the village is visible from the Marina.

Riverside Park, Ballymoney

This traffic-free section of route runs through 40 acres of mixed parkland with an extensive network of paths. Riverside Park is an important refuge for wildlife with stands of planted native deciduous trees and a large fresh water pond. The park includes a children’s play park, picnic areas.

Mountsandel Fort, Coleraine

On a high mound on the eastern bank of the River Bann lies Mountsandel Fort and mesolithic site. It dates back to the Iron Age and is the earliest known human settlement site in Ireland; nomadic hunter-gatherers built their shelters here around 7000 B.C. From Mountsandel there are good views over The River Bann and Somerset Wood; a forest walk leads from the Fort down to the banks of the Bann where swans, kingfishers and herons nest along the river.

Christie Park, Coleraine

This attractive riverside park on Coleraine’s waterfront offers fine views of the Bann and a traffic-free path for walkers and cyclists. Seasonal boat trips operate from the Park.

Hezlett House, Coleraine

One of Northern Ireland’s oldest surviving buildings, Hezlett House has recently been thatched and the walls limewashed. The National Trust property is a fine example of a rural 17th-century Irish thatched cottage. Hezlett’s quaint exterior, with its elegant Georgian windows, hides a curious early timber frame dating from 1690. The cosy interior is simply furnished in mid-Victorian style. Guided tours are available.

The Barmouth

The Lower Bann enters the Atlantic Ocean at the Barmouth, evidenced by the large sand bar that builds up at the mouth of the river. The River enters the sea between two breakwaters first constructed in 1879 by the Coleraine Harbour Commissioners to facilitate safe navigation for the growing trade from the port of Coleraine. The Barmouth estuary is a sanctuary for waders, wildfowl and nesting birds. The hide on the west side of the River Bann allows birdwatchers great viewing opportunities.

Additional Cycling Opportunities

The Sperrins

Twelve circular signed routes ranging in length from 11 – 41 miles are available in the Sperrins, County Tyrone. Sperrins routes close to the Lower Bann Cycleway include Routes 9 and 10 between Swatragh and Tobarmore and Routes 11 and 12 which radiate east and west from Garvagh.

The Loughshore Trail

The Loughshore Trail is a bi-directional 113 mile on road cycle route that encircles Lough Neagh. The mainly flat route follows the peaceful shoreline of the lough and is clearly signposted with National Cycle Network route 94 signs bearing the Loughshore Trail logo.

North Coast Route 93

On the North Coast, National Cycle Network Route 93 offers cycling against the backdrop of some of the most stunning scenery in Northern Ireland. The two mile path between Bushmills and The Giants Causeway is perfect for family cycling in a traffic free environment.
